

AFTERGLOW: HART ISLAND

People will travel together to the Island by boat, as they get nearer, small specks of light floating above the Island become visible. Approaching the island, the lights become clearer and as they disembark the lights hover overhead.

After everyone has arrived, the ceremony will begin.

In silence, the lights will begin to move, representing the lives that were lost, the lights will dance. Gradually each individual light will come together to produce a monumental body of light.

This luminous entity represents the importance and strength of solidarity, at the same time recognising and remembering those we lost in this unprecedented time.

Standing in silence, side-by-side, individuals can experience emotion without feeling lonely. They can smile, cry, grieve or celebrate with the support and courage of everybody around them.

As the dance is complete, one by one attendees may go and take a light, this light is for them to keep as a token.

This light will represent connectedness, even when they're all alone.

This light will represent the strength of 1000s, even as a single glow.

This light will represent love, even when years have gone by.

This light will last forever, even as the memories may fade.

Slowly, as the lights are taken, the body of light will get smaller, until eventually the last light is then held.

At this point the official ceremony is over and people will take their light with them to remember lives lost and to know that they are not alone...
